To whom it may concern,

I'm glad you are taking one of these paper monsters home. Each one of these monsters belongs to a series of 25 different motifs. Each one came out of an experimentation with the graphic possibilities of the combinations between the number "3" the character "." and the letter "V".

First time I experimented with these three characters, twisting, mirroring and placing them in different shapes. I came to the conclusion that the compositions of characters from one direction look like a naked woman and a penis from the opposite direction. What a strange finding! I thought.

Then I decided: If the "V", "3" and "." characters came into being representations of body parts, then sudden combinations of the characters will become monsters. These monsters have four breasts, gonads in the feet and bellybuttons as mouths.

Now, what to do with your new monster?

Fruits and bottles of perfume can be easily covered with the monsters. I like to make the monsters stand by putting the open part down. In this way you can hide objects below it. When objects are covered they disguise as monsters. The monster's life and way of being in space possesses them. The weight of the covered object will be the same but now our understanding of the object is of a paper monster.

Feel free to decide any other life form for this monster.

Sincerely,

Juan Pablo Plazas.
